OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY. SATURDAYOCTOBER 6

The First and Second Districts. In the First Congressional District there are three candidates: Mr. Pendleton, the present incumbent, a Domocrat; Mr. Spencer, Republican, and Mr. Jones, Native American.

Of the election of Mr. Jones there is no prospect, and he would probably be withdrawn by those who put him in nomination, if it were thought that his withdrawal would increase the chances of Mr. Pendleton. Whether the fact of his standing where he is will most damage the prospects of Mr. Spencer or of Mr. Pendleton, is a question upon which there are differences of opinion. Such arrangements usually injure worst the party which makes them. They may not do so in this particular instance.

As respects Messrs, Spencer and Pendleton, it is sufe to say that both of them are worthy of the confidence of their fellowcitizens, and, whichever may be elected, there is no reason to fear that the interests of the people will be in improper hands. The doctrinal differences between them, whether considered in a party or in a personal aspect, are hardly worthy, at this present time, to be taken into the account. Indeed, we may safely say, upon the great funcy subject of all agritation, we do not know what they are-a state of ignorance which we suspect is pretty extensively shared by the candidates themselves. Upon a point of real importance, we fear that Mr. Spencar's Whig antecedents might lead him a little too far in the direction of him quite far enough in the opposite direction. Having the standing of a faithful reason, party interests aside, for changing one good man for another; and it is no bad maxim, in such cases, for the people to let Spencer's greater age and worldly experishould be an amicable one; for, as they are asylums. both up to the requirements of the place, neither will be made better in the eyes of his fellow-citizens by success, nor worse by defeat.

In the Second District there are also three candidates: Mr. Gurley, Republican, the present incumbent of the seat; Mr. Long, the regular Democratic; and Mr. Harrison, Bell and Everett. The prospects of the latter, with nothing but the numerical force of his party, can not be considered very brilliant; and it is not protably with a view of an election by that agency alone that his friends keep him before the people. Mr. Harrison, by his antecedents, represents a sort of grudge against the Republican party entertained by that relic of Whiggery which became American, such as is common with old associates turned to rivals; and one of the secondary objects of his candidacy is to withdraw votes from his Republican opponent.

Hopes are kept up in the bosoms of Mr. Harrison and his friends by some of the more adroit Democratic leaders, of the divotes from Mr. Long to secure Mr. Harrison's election. This, however, if not contrary to their wishes, is beyond their power. It is said to have been the understanding between Mr. Harrison's friends and these leaders, that, in case that gentleman would consent to be a candidate, the Democratic party frain from making a nomi thus leaving the contest to be carried on between him and the Republican nomince. This agreement, however, the pressure of party usages, and of persons seeking candidacies, was sufficient, practically, to annul, as it will all arrangements for the transfer of votes to candidates outside the party communion. Mr. Harrison will, therefore, have little to stand upon beyond the strength of the Bell-Everett party proper, which, if past figures are reliable, will do little toward securing him the coveted place in Congress.

Mr. Long, the regular Democratic candidate, is not a favorite either with the leaders or the masses of his party, and gained his nomination not so much by his personal merits as through as industrious use of the machinery by which combinations are effected and caucuses controlled, of which he, long since, made himself a part, for the purpose. He will receive the votes of the greater share of the party proper, and will probably gain about as many of the Bell-Everett men who despair of electing Mr. Harrison, as he will lose of Democrats who take a contrary view of the prospect, and despair of electing himself. Of the floating vote-the vote which elects-Mr. Long's chances are not good; as well from his want of personal popularity as from the fact that, other things being equal, the tendency of this vote is to preponderate in favor of the candidate in office.

Mr. Harrison is an amiable gentleman, not without ability, and with a multitude of well-wishers. He stands the admitted representative of a sentiment just in itself and holden by a large and most respectable class of our fellow-citizens; and it is probable that, could be receive the Democratic voteas it was once thought he might-be would be elected. But, however desirous the leaders may be, experience has shown that the Democratic masses are only tructable within certain limits. No Moses has yet arisen capable to lead them out of the party Egypt; and he would be a bold man who would openly avow his willingness to do so. That, therefore, which may be easily agreed upon in secret between wire-workers playing for success, may be one of the most difficult shings to carry into effect; and here is the obstacle to Mr. Harrison's election, which no one appears to be able to remove.

To us, the chances of an election in the Second District appear to be in favor of Mr. Gurley; nor, under present appearances, can this be looked upon as matter for regret. Mr. Gurley gained his first election by his energy, through the use of honorable means. He has, to all appearance, served his constituents faithfully. He is a Republican, and not unmindful of the interests of his party; but he has been a good local Representative.

Party usages, even in the wildest rotation times, accorded to the faithful partism a second nomination; and why should not the people, who have even better reasons for it, return once more the man who has proved himself their faithful pervent.

Wretched Hospitals and Jails. Dorothea Dix has recently been in Michigan and examined the hospitals and jails in that State, which are represented in a deplorable condition from their shameful neglect. We wonder if Miss Dix visited the Commercial Hospital and City Prison while she was here. If she did, she must have been shocked and horrified. Those institutions are disgraceful to the city, the State and humanity, and the Prison unequaled since the days of the Black Hole of Calentta, How much longer must justice be outraged, and decency offended by the continuance of that villainous City Prison. The dungeons of Naples were pleasant places of sojourn to that lostbsome sink of festering vice and airpoisoning corruption.

Webster's Reply to Hayne-A Woman the Cause of its Preservation.

It is stated in an Eastern paper that we are indebted to Mrs. Joseph Gales, wife of the editor of the National Intelligencer, for the celebrated reply of Webster to Hayne in the United States Senate. Mr. Gales had reported it in short-hand, but having no time to write it out, his wife, who was familiar with stenography, undertook to, and diddecipher it, hardly a word needing change Webster read the proof, was delighted, and presented her with his thanks and a set of diamonds. But for Mrs. Gales's industry and determination we should probably have lost the most famous oration over delivered in the United States Senate.

THE Boston Recorder records the providential conversion of a woman from Catholicism. She had attended Protestant preaching, and "received religious impressions." Her husband, alarmed, charged her with insanity, and had her committed to the insane hospital at Northampton. The distressed woman resisted with all her might, but the more she high tariffs and protective duties, while resisted, the more deranged they thought Mr. Pendleton's Democratic antecedents her, and she was put among the insane. might not have the effect to draw "There she found herself in quiet quarters, and had all the Protestant preaching she desired." The result was, she became hopeand pains-taking Representative, we see no lessly plous. "At least," the Recorder says, "she received instruction and impressions as to the way of life, which, we trust, will not easily be lost." Probably enough to well enough alone. As an offset to Judge plant the root of bitterness in that family for life. The Recorder rejoices exceedingly. ence, there is Mr. Pendleton's better health This incident shows what a mighty work of and consequently higher capacity for service. salvation might be wrought in our land, by Between these two gentlemen the contest | putting all the Catholic wives in our insane

[COMMUNICATED.] A Card from John B. Armstrong.

To the Editors of the Daily Press:

It has been reported since I became a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Hamilton County, that I was "engaged in the Bedini riots of 1853."

I believe it to be a duty I owe to myself and friends to contradict thus ramor; therefore I here proclaim it to be false; that I was not connected or engaged in any manner, shape or form with the Bedini riots, and no person of responsibility dare father the falsehood. Yours, respectfully,

THE "GREEKS" IN PARIS-Sharpers Outwitted by a Conjuror .- A Paris letter-writer

Before I quit the fete at Blois, I must not erget to tell you of a novel and excellent expedient the managers resorted to as a means of circumventing the Greeks. These sharpers were never, at any period of time, in so great numbers as they are now in Paris society. They are to be found every-where, and disguised so exactly as gentlemen, intrenched behind so good a name and such fine clothes, it is impossible to detect them for counterfeit until they set to "work." The managers of the fete at Blois knew they would not excape this Greek invasion, and they engaged Mons. Robert Houdin (the well-known conjuror; he lives at Blois now, in well-carned affinence,) to watch the card-tables. The Greeks came and conquered, as tables. The Greeks came and conquered, as they always do; but when they returned to their inn to share their spoils, they found their pockets empty! The next day Mons. Robert Houdin returned the stakes so unfairly lost to the losers, and gave the remain-der, the Greeks money, to the charities of Blois. The professor of legerdemain had delicately picked their pockeus!

THE BETHESDA OF BARENTON .- A Volume entitled Wanderings in Britany says:

cntitled Wanderings in Britany says:

The peasants still bring their sickly children to be cured, and say the water is especially powerful in cases of fever. You say; "Ris, ris! Fountaine de Barentou," dropping a pin the while into the spring, whereupon it breaks into ripples and ousbles; if it laughs, you are to be fortunate; if it remains mute, you will be naincky. Tradition and poesy both say the water fizzes round a swordpoint, but we had nothing larger than pins to try it with, and to those it responded gaily. When the country was in great want of rain, a procession was formed to the fountain, and the priest dipped the foot of the cross out of the church into the water, after which rain is sure to fall abundantly. This ceremony had been successful very lately. The peasants believe the priests can punish them by sprinkling water from the spring on the large stone, the perron of Merlin, above the well, which brings rain throughout the whole parish for many days.

A little girl bearing her mother speak of going into helf-mourning, said, "Why are you going into helf-mourning, mamma—are any of our relations half-dend?"
